

If your dentist uses
The Wand™.
Why not ask if they will use it on you?

You will be pleasantly surprised.

The Wand™
for Comfortable anaesthesia

I'm smiling because my dentist numbs
me up with
The magic Wand™

Our practice is committed to providing you with the latest and best advances in dentistry

That is why we now offer anaesthesia with The “magic” Wand.

This means that every time we numb you up it will be a pleasant experience.

The Wand uses a small hand piece that looks like a pen.

This system gives a supply of anaesthetic in a slow comfortable manner.

The Wand™

Uses a unique new technology, which is unlike any other.

It works at a low pressure and a slow rate that gives an improved anaesthesia.

It works more effectively, resulting in a more pleasant experience.

History of Anaesthesia

The traditional dental syringe has changed very little since its introduction in 1853. In the era of modern dentistry it would seem fitting to use computers to deliver painless dental anaesthesia.

Dental Anaesthesia

Dates back to at least 1800 when a group of chemicals were discovered that blocked the transmission of nerve impulses.

The syringe that delivers dental anaesthetics was invented by Cook in 1920.

Until recently, there had not been major improvements in the way local dental anaesthetics could be delivered.
